TO THE READER.

AS the Labour or Novelty of any Performance must be an insufficient Plea for the publick Regard to it, unless it be recommended to their Favour, by its Usefulness and Exactness, the Compiler of this Chronological Diary, tho' the first of its kind, would not have ventur'd to have publish'd it, if he had been conscious to himself, that he had grudg'd any Pains or Expence to gain that Favour, by rendering it as compleat and as correct as possible.

He has been the better enabled to acquit himself in this Undertaking, by the constant Recourse he has had to Rymer's Foedera, and other Records, Rapin's History of England, and other Authentic Tracts, necessary to be consulted by a Writer of Chronology.

By those Helps he has discover'd and rectify'd many Errors in the common Compositions of that Class, Errors which he finds have been, in a great measure, owing to the Difference between the Old Stile and the New, and to our Lawyers Computation of the Year from the 25th of March, contrary to all other Nations; which have been, and must eternally be productive of gross Anachronisms in History, if the Difference be not very carefully observ'd.

To give only two palpable Instances of the Confusion that attends such a Disagreement in Dates; if the Reader look but two Years backward, he will find no less than three different Denominations of the Year of our Lord affix'd to three State-Papers that were publish'd in one Week, viz.

| | Dated |
|-------------------------------------|--------|
| His Majesty's Speech | 1732-3 |
| The Address of the House of Lords | 1732 |
| The Address of the House of Commons | 1733 |

To the R E A D E R.

So that, if a Person meets with those Addresses some Years hence, he may well incline to think, that they were printed in two different Years, unless he happen to have before him at the same Time, that very Speech from the Throne, to which they are both an Answer.

The Reader also cannot but remember the Epidemical Colds, that then reign'd in this Part of the World, when some of our News Papers, not excepting that Publish'd by Authority, were dated in 1732, and others in 1733; for which reason it will not be strange, if hereafter Persons should be in some Doubt, whether that Distemper happen'd in 1732, or 1733.

As this may suffice to shew the absolute Necessity of an Uniformity in the Dates of History, the Compiler of this Remembrancer has been at the Pains, which no Chronologist has ever yet taken, to ascertain the Events to their exact Time, by reducing the New Stile to the Old in the Calculation of the Days, and by conforming with all other Nations in beginning the Year on the First of January.

To conclude: Tho' this is no hasty Production, and is therefore more correct than any of the kind; yet it may be presum'd, that in a Work of such a Nature which takes up such an infinite Number of Figures, some Mistakes may slip both from the Pen and Press, which the Author however doubts not, but every considerate Reader will excuse; and assures him, they shall be corrected in future Editions as they occur to his Notice, as these are that follow.
